WHEREAS, Section 101080 of the California Health and Safety Code authorizes the Local Health Officer to declare a local health emergency in the jurisdiction or areas thereof affected by release or escape of hazardous waste which is an immediate threat to the public health or imminent and proximate threat of the introduction of any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease, chemical agent, noncommunicable biologic agent, toxin, or radioactive agent;

WHEREAS, on December 20, 2017, the County of Santa Barbara Health Officer declared a Local Health Emergency finding that the wildfire (known as Thomas Fire) that started in Santa Paula on December 4, 2017, and concurrent fire events created an imminent threat to public health in Santa Barbara County in the form of contaminated debris from household hazardous waste and materials and structural debris resulting from the damage or destruction of approximately 87 structures;

WHEREAS, on December 21, 2017, the Board of Supervisors found an imminent or proximate threat to public health based on the expected presence of toxic materials and hazardous substances contained in the ash and debris from the Thomas Fire necessitated the declaration by the Local Health Officer of a Local Health Emergency;

WHEREAS, the potential exposure to toxic materials and hazardous substances from Thomas Fire debris continues to exist;

WHEREAS, the potential for widespread toxic exposures and threats to public health and the environment exists in the aftermath of a major wildfire disaster, and debris and ash from residential structure fires contain hazardous substances that can result in adverse health impacts to the public;

WHEREAS, the combustion of building materials such as siding, roofing tiles, and insulation result in dangerous ash that may contain asbestos, heavy metals, and other hazardous substances, and household hazardous substances such as paint, gasoline, cleaning products, pesticides, compressed gas cylinders, and chemicals may have been stored in homes, garages, or sheds that may have burned or released in the fire, also producing hazardous substances;

WHEREAS, exposure to hazardous substances may lead to acute and chronic health effects and may cause long-term public health and environmental impacts; uncontrolled hazardous substances and debris pose significant threats to public health through inhalation of dust particles and contamination of drinking water supplies; and improper handling can expose workers to toxic materials, and improper transport and disposal of fire debris can spread hazardous substances throughout the community;

WHEREAS, on December 12, 2017, the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors ratified the local emergency declaration; and

WHEREAS, the Santa Barbara County Health Officer and the Santa Barbara County Public Health Director have found:

1. That conditions of certain existing debris resulting from the Thomas Fire in the County of Santa Barbara involving destruction of a number of structures pose a substantial present or potential hazard to human health and the environment unless properly and immediately managed; and
2. That protection of the County's natural resources and watershed from fire related debris runoff needs to be addressed immediately; and
3. That the aforesaid threat to public health necessitates the declaration.
