Re: Threshold of significance for Greenhouse Gas (GHG) emissions.

Dear Santa Barbara County Supervisors,

Please find attached two hundred and nineteen letters from County residents asking you to adopt a zero emissions threshold for greenhouse gas significance from new industrial polluters.

The latest report from the UN Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change states that we need to reduce GHG emissions by 40 to 70 percent over the next thirty-five years to avoid “severe, pervasive and irreversible impacts for people and ecosystems.”¹ Local impacts from GHG emissions are also well documented, including temperature and ecosystem disruption, rising sea levels, ocean acidification, impacts to water supplies, wildfires, etc.²

Santa Barbara County residents ask that we do our part in reducing emissions.

- “Zero net increase” is supported by science as per the APCD staff report.
- Legally, significance thresholds should be determined based on science. (Business and admin impacts are for determining feasibility, not significance.)
- The California Air Pollution Control Officers Association agrees to the cumulative impact of small projects. “While it may be true that many GHG sources are individually too small to make any noticeable difference to climate change, it is also true that the countless small sources around the globe combine to produce a very substantial portion of total GHG emissions.” (CAPCOA 2008)
- A 10,000 ton threshold is too high. This is the equivalent of adding the yearly emissions of 2,000 cars to county roads.

2015 MAY 13 PM 3:10
COUNTY OF SANTA BARBARA
CLERK OF THE SUPERIOR COURT

- Counties are required by state law to reduce emissions and that is why the Climate Action Plan (CAC) was developed. A 10,000 ton threshold would eliminate all these identified savings. For instance, with this threshold five oil projects would eliminate the savings from implementing a CCA.
- The 1,000 ton threshold recommended by the County Planning Commission and the minority APCD Advisory Council was suggested to minimize the burden on small projects. However, since there are far fewer industrial projects, a zero threshold could easily be applied to all industrial projects (oil, gas and mining) without administrative burden.
- The State Lands Commission has successfully used a “zero threshold” for even small projects under 1,000 tons. For instance, the Venoco PRC421 project would only emit 167 tons GHGs but mitigation is required.³

Santa Barbara County faces a dramatic increase in GHG-intensive oil production due to the pursuit of heavy oil, watery depleted oil, and growing use of steam injection engines – all of which mean large increases in GHG emissions that must be mitigated if we are not to increase overall emissions.

The “business as usual” (BAU) approach taken by the APCD is woefully inadequate as it only captures 1.3% of emissions. Furthermore, it was not recommended by APCD’s technical staff.

Feasibility should not be a consideration when setting a threshold of significance, but it is useful to know that full mitigation is feasible at a cost of pennies per barrel of oil and that they will generate auxiliary benefits such as jobs and health.

On behalf of the Sierra Club and our thousands of local members, thank you for acting to address greenhouse gas emissions under the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA).

Respectfully submitted,

Katie Davis
