In view of what happened recently to the Beachside Bar and Grill, isn't it rather obvious to all, even to the well-meaning (we assume) 'environmentalists', that the rock wall(s) (or their equivalent!) are necessary to preserve the Goleta Beach public park?

We have lived in Goleta since 1962 and have enjoyed the park ourselves and with our children over these 52 years. We have seen the sands (beach!) increase and decrease regularly and often in size and scope over these years with the varied weather conditions and the seasons. I even have photos! 😊

Furthermore, as we traveled to other places up and down the CA coast, we have regularly seen the benefits of "rock walls" - they are regularly used to preserve railroad tracks, other beaches, to prevent erosion of land under established (and often expensive) homes, etc., etc. And Nature has provided its own 'rock walls' to preserve, for example, the Shoreline Drive Park!

It is only common sense. Humans have been building 'revetments' to protect life and property from the dangers and erosion of 'natural' and various sea activity for millenia!
